Early Warning Signs

The early signs of dementia can be very subtle. They're also different from person to person. You may not have a strong feeling that something's wrong. You might not even notice any early changes. Often, someone else notices them first. Learn more about the most common early signs of dementia. Your local doctor (GP) can guide you through the uncertainty and help you access the necessary support.

Advance Care Planning

Advance care planning involves planning for your future health care. It enables you to make some decisions now about the health care you would or would not like to receive if you were to become seriously ill and unable to communicate your preferences or make treatment decisions. It helps to ensure your loved ones and health providers know what matters most to you and respect your treatment preferences. The Statewide Office of Advance Care Planning is funded by the Queensland Department of Health and can provide assistance with advance care planning information and resources for patients, carers, family members and health professionals.

Call: 1300 007 227 or Email: acp@health.qld.gov.au

For Family, Friends and Carers

Nearly 1.6 million Australians are involved in the care of someone living with dementia. It can be a rewarding role, but it can also come with big changes to your life, and there are good days and hard days. Below is some information, advice and support specifically designed for family, friends and carers.

Carer Gateway

Carer Gateway is an Australian Government program providing free services and support for carers. The Australian Government works with a range of health and carer organisations across Australia known as Carer Gateway Service providers to deliver services to carers no matter where they live in Australia.

Services include: In-person online peer support groups, tailored support packages (e.g. transport), counselling, self-guided coaching, skills courses, emergency respite.

Grief and Loss Programs (BlueCare)

People experience grief in many ways. The grief and loss journeys relating to bereavement and dementia can bring intense feelings of sadness, confusion, anger, guilt and fear, as well as memories of happier times. BlueCare's Grief and Loss programs provide extra support and a safe environment in which to share these journeys of grief and loss.

Dementia Behaviour Management Advisory Services (DBMAS)

When changed behaviours start to impact the care of a person living with dementia, or their carers, we can provide on the ground support, clinical advice and more to help. DBMAS is part of Dementia Support Australia funded by the Australian Government and free to access.

Helping respond to changed behaviours

Working closely with the person living with dementia and their carers, including GPs and clinicians, DBMAS designs tailored, non-pharmacological supports and help you implement these. Whether you are a home care provider, respite service, in aged care or a carer at home. They can also support in acute care to facilitate transition back home or into care.

DBMAS is designed to provide more proactive support early on, where there is less risk related to the behaviour. This supports people regardless of where they are, their dementia diagnosis or age. If DBMAS isn't the right service for them, they'll connect them to the right program.

- 24/7 phone support.
- Phone or in-person assessment of the person living with dementia and their environment.
- Involving the career/support network to understand the person with dementia and their needs, including their background and life experiences.
- Highly personalised advice, strategies and written recommendations.
- On-going support and guidance to implement the recommendations.

- Increasing staff knowledge through modelling strategies and recommendations.
- Access to current research and guidelines.
- Referrals to other DSA services.

Ozcare Dementia Advisory and Support Service (DASS)

Most commonly accessed via My Aged Care. This service offers information and support to people with dementia and their families throughout Queensland. For some, this may mean support to go through a diagnostic process, if they are concerned about their memory. For others, it may mean help coming to terms with a dementia diagnosis, providing support and suggestions for facing daily challenges. Can also help people navigate local services so they are aware of what's on offer for people living with dementia.

They can visit you in your own home or wherever you feel comfortable to speak, either face-to-face or by telephone, usually working with people for 2-3 months to help them formulate a plan for living with dementia.

Free for those referred via the Federal Government's Commonwealth Home Support Program (CHSP). Call 1800 692 273 for more information.
